Director's Note

I remember sitting at the dinner table in 1953, and hearing on the radio that the Korean War had ended. It was the first war I really knew about. And I was just glad it was over.

Seventeen years later, in 1970, *M*A*S*H* (the movie) was released, and in 1972 CBS Television premiered the series that ran until 1983 with a substantial following. (If you are like me, you still watch reruns when they are shown.) This script of *M*A*S*H* is based on the original book by Dr. Richard Hornberger (Hooker), a surgeon in the 8055th MASH unit, on which the fictional 4077th was based. He was a thoracic surgeon, and considers himself the real Benjamin Franklin Pierce. He was 26 years old when drafted, and really was from Crabapple Cove, Maine. Noticeably missing from this production are Corporal Klinger and B. J. Hunnicut. They were additions to the TV series — characters not found in the original book or the movie. It has been a challenge with this production to blend the script by Tim Kelly, the book, the movie and the television series. Each has its strong points, and in each the characters are slightly different. I hope you enjoy the blend we have created.

— Anne P. Davidson

There will be one fifteen minute intermission
